This case is an interlocutory appeal of a class certification order that is currently set for oral argument on September 11, 2023. On August 28, 2023, the District Court issued an order granting Google's motion to exclude from trial the precise injury and damages model on which the class certification order is based. ECF 588.¹ The District Court issued a second order addressing decertification, in which it stated that "the order granting certification should be vacated," but that the District Court lacked jurisdiction to do so because the certification order is currently on appeal in this Court. ECF 589. Accordingly, Google seeks the following relief:

First, pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1(b), Google seeks a limited remand from this Court to the District Court so that the District Court can decertify the class as it has indicated should occur.

Second, pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 34(b) and Circuit Rule 34-2, Google requests that the Court vacate the oral argument that is currently set for September 11, 2023, in this appeal. Once the District Court has decertified the class, Google's appeal of the certification order will in all likelihood be moot, and Google will promptly notify this Court.

Google has consulted with counsel for Plaintiffs-Appellees, who have indicated that they will respond to this motion after they have read it. In light of the proximity of oral argument, Google respectfully requests that this motion receive expedited treatment.

In support of this motion, Google states as follows:

1. Plaintiffs-Appellees represent a putative class of consumers who purchased mobile phone apps, app subscriptions, or in-app purchases through Google's Play Store. 1-ER-4-7. Plaintiffs allege that Google charged supracompetitive service fees to app developers, and claim that the prices they paid were inflated as a result.

Id.

2. The District Court issued an order certifying the class on November 28, 2022. 1-ER-3. This Court granted permission to appeal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(f) on February 27, 2023. The District Court subsequently set the underlying case for trial starting on November 6, 2023. See ECF 588 at 2. This Court granted in part Google's motion for an expedited appeal, and set oral argument for September 11, 2023.

3. The District Court's class certification order depended on its conclusion that the expert opinion of Dr. Hal Singer was admissible under Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), and could serve as common proof of injury and damages. See 1-ER-10-25.

4. While this appeal was pending, the parties continued to proceed towards trial in the District Court. Google moved to exclude Dr. Singer's expert opinions at trial under Daubert. ECF 487. After briefing and a hearing, the District Court issued an order on Monday, August 28, 2023, granting Google’s motion to exclude Dr. Singer’s testimony. See ECF 588. The Court was persuaded “that Dr. Singer’s [injury and damages] model is not within accepted economic theory and literature, and is based on assumptions about the Play Store apps that are not supported by the evidence.” Id. at 16.²

5. Immediately after issuing its order excluding Dr. Singer’s opinion under Daubert, the District Court issued an order titled “Order re Decertification and Class Notice.” ECF 589. The court explained that Dr. Singer’s opinion “was an essential element of the consumer plaintiffs’ argument in support of certification” and stated that, as a result of the subsequent decision excluding Dr. Singer’s injury and damages model under Daubert, “the order granting certification should be vacated.” Id. at 1. The District Court noted, however, that this Court’s order granting permission to appeal had “terminated [its] authority to decertify the class.” Id. at 1-2 (citing City of Los Angeles, Harbor Division v. Santa Monica Baykeeper, 254 F.3d 882, 885 (9th Cir. 2001)).

² The District Court likewise rejected an “alternative approach” proffered by Dr. Singer, finding it “too anemic to” present “to a jury.” ECF 588 at 17. This alternative approach is not the basis on which the class was certified and is not at issue in the appeal of the class certification order.

6. In light of the District Court’s ruling stating that it would vacate the class certification order that is the basis for this appeal, this Court should issue a limited remand under Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 12.1(b). The District Court’s order is effectively an indicative ruling, such that this Court can enter a limited remand in order to effectuate it. See Mendia v. Garcia, 874 F.3d 1118, 1122 (9th Cir. 2017). The District Court “made its intentions” to vacate the class certification order “sufficiently clear” to warrant a remand under Rule 12.1(b). Id.

7. As Rule 12.1(b) contemplates, this Court should retain jurisdiction over the appeal until the District Court has issued an order decertifying the class.

8. In the meantime, because oral argument is currently scheduled for Monday, September 11, 2023—and is therefore less than two weeks away—Google requests that this Court remove this case from the oral argument calendar. Although this Court does not typically vacate an oral argument “within 14 days of the date set,” the District Court’s express statement that the class should be decertified and that it lacks authority to do so amounts to “exceptional circumstances” that warrant vacating the oral argument in this case. Circuit Rule 34-2.

9. Finally, because oral argument is relatively soon, Google respectfully requests that the Court act on this motion on an expedited basis.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Google respectfully requests that this Court issue a limited remand, while retaining jurisdiction, so that the District Court can decertify the class as contemplated by its August 28, 2023, order. Google also requests that this Court remove this case from the upcoming oral argument calendar set for Monday, September 11, 2023.

Respectfully submitted,
